

ABSTRACT

A method and apparatus for implementing information transmission, computation, and especially Internet server functionality by means of hardware modules are provided. Software implementing an Internet server is converted to hardware by using a merging circuit module that merges input packets from a plurality of circuits into one output. A designer is free from a problem of complicated input/output timing control.